Foreword

We send this book among you, realizing that it probably contains mistakes. But we have done our best—therefore, we offer no apologies. We have not endeavored to produce a work distinguished for its artistic merit; our purpose has been to prepare for you a compilation of pictures and records which shall be of some definite service to you in years to come.

The late beginning of the fall term, the discontinuance of Assembly during the process of redecorating the auditorium, and the apathy of many in the matter of furnishing us with their photographs, have been obstacles difficult to surmount. The first two were, of course, unavoidable; the last was entirely unnecessary. To those who, either actively or passively, have hindered us in our work, and who have made our task far more arduous than it should have been, we extend complete forgiveness. To those who have helped us by their cooperation and words of encouragement, we are grateful to a degree inexpressible in words.

We are glad to have served you. We have tried to serve you well. If, at some future time, beneath the evening lamp, by some quiet fireside, these pages bring to you memories of those friends and events from which Time has separated you—such is Time's way!—our labors shall have been fully justified.

Kent State's Four Year Course

LESTER S. IVINS,
Chairman Four Year Course Committee.

It is a matter of great importance to the friends of Kent State to learn that one of last year's graduates, Lauramari Wegman, who secured her B.S. in Education, has just been granted her admission card to the graduate school of the University of Chicago. This admission is granted without any condition in the way of an examination, work to be made up, or a probationary period. Her splendid record at Kent State was appreciated by the University of Chicago officials. Her admission to the graduate school of Chicago is a deserved recognition. It also places Kent State in a splendid position among the colleges of the country that are now granting the B.S. Degree in Education.

The graduates of the four year course are making a success in the high schools. Many are occupying good positions as school superintendents, principals of elementary schools, principals of high schools, as well as teachers of high school subjects.

The demand for high school teachers in Ohio is greater than the supply. This state is required annually to secure hundreds of high school teachers from other states. The demand is still increasing because junior high school principals are now requiring teachers of the 7th, 8th, and 9th grades to have degrees. It is only a question of time until junior high schools will be classified by the State Department of Education the same as senior high schools are at the present time.

When one studies the list of graduates of the two year course at Kent State, he is impressed with the large number of excellent teachers who should be working on the third and fourth year of the college course. If these graduates who now have 96 term hours or 24 credits, would secure a total of 192 term hours they could receive the B.S. Degree in Education. This would mean 96 term hours of work in addition to what they already have, which can be taken in any quarter of the school year. In other words, all the work a two year graduate already has recorded, will count on the four year course.

Many of Kent State's two year graduates are now working on the four year course. During the summer of 1922, 46 were so registered. During the summer of 1923, 276 were working on the degree. These figures indicate the tendency. A much larger number will take degree work during the summer of 1924 than in 1923.

Between one-fourth and one-third of the present enrollments at Kent State are in the four year course. Almost the entire freshman class who entered the college department October 1, 1923, are planning to take four years of straight college work. A small percentage of these will have their programs so arranged each term that it will be possible, if they find it necessary, for them to secure sufficient normal work the first two years to obtain the normal diploma and begin teaching at that time. The final plan of those in the four year course who take the diploma in two years will be to return later for the third and fourth year of the degree course.

A degree student must have a major containing at least 36 term hours in one department and a minor of 24 term hours in another department. If the major is in the department of Education, then the student must take two minors.

The required Education which was taken to secure the Elementary Certificate is counted in making up the requirement for the high school certificate.

The degree student in addition to completing the major and minor requirement, and the educational work for the high school certificate, must also secure 12 term hours in the Social Science Group, 12 term hours in the English Group, 12 term hours in the Science Group and 12 term hours in the Industrial and Fine Arts Group. After completing all these requirements a student still has opportunity to take additional courses in any department he desires to make the total 192 term hours.

The Senior class taking the four year course this year will be the largest in the school's history.

Students desiring further information concerning the four year course should write to the college at once. If any person has an official transcript of credits from another college, it should be sent to us, after which we will inform the student what additional work is required for the B.S. Degree from Kent State. Credit slips should not be sent in any case as the college is required to have the official transcript signed by the Registrar to give an official rating.

ORGANIZATIONS
Kent State Council

Kent State Council was established in February, 1924. It is the first organization of its kind in our college, as its membership is drawn from both the student body and the faculty. The Council meets twice a month to consider ways of co-ordinating and guiding the activities of the student body, and to initiate new forms of activity on the campus. On March twentieth, the Council was presented by Dr. McGilvrey to the college, at a regular assembly. Each member of the Council spoke on some one phase of work to be undertaken. The new organization ought to prove of great value in promoting a “Greater Kent State.”
The Women's League

This is the one college society to which every woman in Kent State belongs.

The League arranges for one all-college dance each term, and for a tea dance after each registration during the college year. The tea dances are in connection with the Big Sister organization, which the League has in charge, and has this year reorganized. The League gives the reception and dance in honor of the college guests at Home Coming.

Besides the social events, the League puts on a definite number of assembly programs during the year, one of them being the Arbor Day program, with the planting of a tree by the League on the campus. It also holds itself responsible for certain parts of the Campus Night program.

The League has only one policy—the greatest service possible to all the women of the college, and the building up of a stronger college spirit.
The Men's Union of Kent State

Organization has come to be the keynote of the twentieth century. Political candidates intrench themselves behind the bulwarks of organization—Parties. Business men have augmented their powers for the accumulation of the world's goods by the most intensive, as well as extensive organizations—companies and corporations. Last, but not least, student leaders have become aware of the infinite possibilities for the advancement of Kent State athletics and a greater college spirit, which are inherent in a co-ordination of functioning units. Truly this suffices to show that the banding together of Kent State men, who are willing to give themselves to great tasks which are facing our school today, is in accord with the trend of the times. Every man who enrolls in the college automatically becomes a member of the Men's Union. Although it is not bound together by any written constitution or other document, this group is held together by a singleness of purpose, which finds expression in its slogan: "A Better and Greater Kent State College."

"The Kentonian"

Kent State's College paper, "The Kentonian," like everything else at Kent State, had a small beginning, but in passing through the years of progress appears today a paper of which we are quite proud. In its early years it was a four-page weekly published by the English 12 classes and printed in the College printing room. On stated occasions only did it assume a larger size.

As the years passed, the paper ceased to be a four-page weekly and became a twenty-four page booklet, published about every six weeks. These publications are of such immensity that the work no longer is done in the College printing room, but is taken care of by outside publishing houses.

In 1922-1923 each number had a characteristic cover design appropriate for each of the several occasions, but in the present year a plain standard cover has been adopted.

The expense of publishing "The Kentonian" is met partly by its subscription price and partly by the student activity fund. The subscription price, however, has been greatly reduced since the earliest publications of the paper. Originally a subscription cost $1.50 per year. Today one may receive the entire year's publication for 50c.

In its early days the paper circulated only among the students of the College. Today it is sent far and wide to members of our Alumni. Approximately two thousand copies of "The Greater Kent State" number were distributed.

This résumé gives one the historical background of our College paper which is now a regular publication of our institution. It is contributed to by our entire student body, arranged by the present members of the staff, and printed by the Schueneman Printing Company of Akron, Ohio.

The Kent College Press

The Kent College Press is a publication that speeds up by subtle sarcasm and naive witticisms the slow and stagnant inertia of dying ambitions moving sluggishly in the college student.

The college press is a medium whereby the necessary facts in regard to modern life are delicately filtered through the brains of all classes—the ignorant and illiterate along with the heady and the wise.

Being a forerunner of a college of Journalism its greatness and importance can not be overestimated. It is the medium through which the student may express himself in a free and easy manner that springs from the heart.

It is distinctly a student publication and its most valid claim for recognition is the "Red Flame."
The Y. W. C. A. of Kent State is the only religious organization on the campus. The efforts of the chapter are directed along the three lines of devotion, education, and social service.

It is under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. that the Christmas Carol singing has been conducted for the last two years.

Much interest has been shown in working for the Caney Creek Community Center, at Pippapass, Kentucky. Several boxes were sent there for Christmas.

Kent State sent several representatives to the “Y” Conference at Lake Erie College, Painsville, Ohio, in April, 1923. Miss Marie Young and Miss Eloise Chamberlain were sent to the Y. W. C. A. Sectional Conference at Eaglesmere, Pennsylvania, in June, 1923. Miss Laura Richardson and Miss Nina Chapman attended the “W” Conference at Wooster College, March, 1924.

Of special interest to all members is the “Candle Light Service” in March, when the officers for the new year are installed.
The Orchestra is the crowning feature of the new instrumental department which has been added to the college this year. It is under the direction of Chas. F. Corlett, of Dana's Institute. This organization has appeared in Assembly twice this year creditably, and has also furnished the music for the Annual Board Play, "Green Stockings," and the High School Senior Class Play, "Daddy-Long-Legs." In ensemble with the organ and four hands at the piano, the Orchestra will play the first movement of Schubert's Unfinished Symphony at Commencement.

The membership of the Orchestra includes not only college students, but also students of the Junior and Senior High Schools.

Off-Campus Girls

Our Women Students

The women students of Kent State are diversified and unified in their several organizations. Each woman is a member of one of the lesser groups, according to where she lives during her college course. If she lives in one of the dormitories, then she is a member of the Lowry group or the Moulton group. If she lives at home, or rooms in a private family in Kent, then she is a member of the Off Campus group. Each one of these groups is thoroughly organized, and arranges for a certain definite number of activities, chiefly social. Naturally the women students make most of their friendships within the lesser groups to which they may belong.

There are, however, abundant opportunities for all the women students to meet those outside these smaller groups. In their class rooms, on the athletic teams, in the Y. W. C. A., in the college assemblies, and at the all college parties, women meet and know those who do not live in their own residence groups. Furthermore, there is an organization of all the women of the college—the Women's League. Every woman automatically becomes a member of this society when she registers in the college. It is through this League that the Big Sister organization is being developed in Kent State.

A few intimate friends, well chosen, are, indeed, a priceless boon in any young woman's life; but a wide acquaintance with many young women is in itself most educative. Opportunities for enriching one's life in both these ways are open to the women students of Kent State.
The special art class may be small, but nevertheless we are an important group.

Where do the various committees go for posters, or for advice on decorations? The art classes are always ready to do their bit in making dances and entertainments successful through their advertising abilities.

We have our good times together. Our visits to the art museums are always enjoyable. Our visit to the Cleveland art museum proved doubly entertaining through the generous efforts of Mr. Howard of the Cleveland School of Education. He was a very interesting guide; the pictures took on new meaning through his interpretation.

Our picnics are happy affairs. The lunches are especially tasty when packed in the baskets which we have made and decorated with our own hands.
The department of Home Economics of Kent State is truly living up to its standard in the economizing of material, time, and talent. People are at last realizing the value of a course in this department. Besides the special students training in the subject, fully two-thirds of the graduates of the other departments have elected courses in Home Economics during the past year.

A guest at one of the luncheons given by the girls of the department finds the girls not only capable of serving a well-planned meal, but also well versed in the art of receiving and entertaining. The clothing exhibit and reception at Homecoming showed the results achieved in the work of the department.

One afternoon in April, the girls of the Home Economics Department, under the direction of Miss Nixson, gave a combination bridge-party and dance. The proceeds of the affair were handed over to the Chestnut Burr—without any solicitation whatever on the part of the staff.

Such deeds as this spring from that spirit of co-operation and unselfishness for which Kent State is striving. The Chestnut Burr gladly tenders the Home Economics Department this slight recognition.

Home Economics
The Music Department was fortunate in having an exceptionally large and strong class of special students this year. The classes are growing and each year shows a decided increase in both numbers and quality.

The work in piano and voice has been unusually good and the students of the group have made the music of the Assembly programs both pleasing and entertaining.

The combined classes have sung at Assembly and have furnished music for the Baccalaureate program and for the Music programs of the Music Department.

Voice and piano recitals in class have been interesting features of the class work.

Seniors:—Mary Helen Squires, Rosetta O’Connor, Ruth Hunter, Katherine Chan- man, Thelma Proehl, Sonia Gold.

Green Stockings

"Green Stockings," given April fourth under the auspices of the annual board, is a clever English comedy. The heroine, tired of being patronized, invents a lover for herself. But, so strange are the workings of Fate, the very man whom Celia thinks she has invented, actually exists. When the play reaches the point at which Celia declares that her lover has been killed, the real man appears. Of course, the ending is a happy one—Celia marries her "Hobbles."

One Hundred Eleven
Department of Extension

By Lester S. Ivins, Director

The Extension Department of Kent State College was organized very soon after the establishment of the college. The regular instructors began teaching college subjects in the field before the buildings were completed on the campus. This plan very quickly built up a large and efficient Department of Extension. Few colleges in the country have given teachers in service better opportunities to gain professional credit than has Kent State.

Superintendents of Schools attribute a large part of the professional spirit of teachers who teach in Northeastern Ohio to the extension work which has been provided by the institution at Kent. These Superintendents point out the fact that summer school work alone is not sufficient. They say teachers do better when pursuing a regular course of study while teaching.

This last winter the Department of Extension established a Bureau of Lecture Service. Many of the regular faculty members have consented to accept speaking engagements in Kent territory. The Department is prepared to mail to any interested person a list of the names of the faculty members and the subjects upon which they are willing to speak.

The purpose of Kent State from the beginning, has been to offer every possible opportunity for educational advancement to teachers in the field. If a group applies for an extension center during the late summer quarter or very early in September, the institution makes an effort to send an instructor to this center. If a sufficient number cannot be secured, those interested are informed they can secure work through the Home Study Department.

The regular instructors who are full time extension men are at present Prof. S. A. Harbout and Prof. D. W. Pearce. Both of these men are very competent instructors and capable of giving high class work to persons interested in extension. We suggest that persons who are interested in extension work to secure credits for the diploma or for the degree during the coming school year call at the office at Kent State, or write the college or the Director for full information.

One Hundred Fifteen
Kent State and The Alumni

Do you realize that the alumni of an institution are its most important factor?

You and I come here day after day and we see each other, and see our instructors, but, unless we are here at Home Coming time, we see but few of the alumni. Thus it is only natural that we should get the idea that the alumni of our college are almost an unknown quantity.

Just because we do not see them, however, does not prove that there is no such body.

Let me prove to you that there is a great body of Kent State College alumni, and that it is a most influential factor. Since this college was established in 1913, it has graduated 1,623 students. These are the alumni proper of our college—the real graduates of Kent State. Besides these there is that multitude of students, totaling almost 20,000, who have been enrolled here at some time or other but have not yet completed their courses. These are also sometimes called the alumni.

Nearly all these people are at work in the field of education,—those who have graduated and those who still look forward to that honor. They are showing to the state of Ohio, and to other states of the Union, what Kent State College really is. The public judges an institution by its representatives. Kent State stands or falls, lives or dies, by the type of teacher it sends out. These teachers gain new ideas through experience and are able to criticize the methods and policies of this college and to offer suggestions for its improvement.

In the past the alumni of our college have not been as active as the alumni of some other colleges, especially of private and religious institutions. This may be due to the fact that our alumni members have not been called upon for financial support, or it may be because they have felt that they had no agency within the college, through which they could operate. We want them to feel that here is a medium through which their wishes and suggestions may be made known.

Soon you, too, will be alumni. We want you to feel that here is always a council and that through it you may be in close touch with the college. Come back often and feel free to write to the council at any time. For here is a long needed organization in which faculty, alumni and student body will find a medium through which their wishes may materialize.

This council can become great only in so far as it is used. We firmly believe it has within its powers and possibilities the making of that something to which we all look forward with eagerness—A GREATER KENT STATE.

By MABEL C. BERNS,
Rep. of Kent State Council,
Kent State College.
Athletics
The Athletic Board of Kent State is a student-faculty board organized and maintained to govern athletic activities of both men and women students. Action of the Board is subject at all times to the approval of the President. With the growing strength of our teams, the introduction of the intra-mural program of sports, the opening up of the four-year Physical Training Course, and the completion of the new gymnasium, the work of this Board will become more and more important. The officers for the year are:

Baseball has long been a major sport at Kent State. It is the one game which seems to have a general appeal to the student body and it is in this sport that the Blue and Gold has written the most cherished pages of its athletic history.

While the season of 1923 was not a complete success in respect to games won and lost, the squad was the largest in history and competition for positions on the first nine was very keen.

Early season practice was hampered somewhat by the improvements made on Rockwell Field, but the team finally struck its stride and closed the schedule with a very creditable showing.

Coach Paul G. Chandler directed the play of the team on the diamond while Elmer P. Steigner attended to the managerial duties.
Football

Victory is not essential to success! Hannibal, one of history’s greatest military leaders, never achieved victory, but his heroic efforts earned him an enviable place in the Hall of Success.

This is by way of introducing the 1923 football season at Kent State, the record of which shows no victories, but a season which may well be considered the most successful in school history.

There are many reasons why Kent State was not victorious on the gridiron during the past year. The squad was small and without experience. The starting of school one month later than usual prevented the all-important conditioning period. The team that was coached to start the season was early riddled by injuries and withdrawals. Light and inexperienced, the Blue and Gold was forced to meet on the gridiron some of the most formidable eves in the Ohio Conference.

Please don’t misinterpret: this is not written as a defense—the 1923 Kent State football team needs no defense.

Whatever may have been Coach Harsh’s contributions in his first year at the helm of Kent State football, there is no gainsaying that the greatest was “FIGHT.” Bruised, battered and beaten, Kent State’s gallant warriors of the moleskin never relinquished that “FIGHT” and they were battling in the last minute of the last game with a spirit that augurs nothing but victory in the future.

The Silver Foxes of 1923 gave to their school its first touchdown, but they also gave something infinitely more than that. They created a fighting spirit that will live—an undying determination that will make the football record at Kent State in the future a thing of joy.

All hail the season of 1923 which witnessed the birth of an unconquerable spirit! Honor the players of 1923 and enshrine them in memory’s treasure-house!

Basketball

Giving the best in the Ohio conference a tough run for every victory: defeating our ancient enemy, West Virginia; seizing for Kent State the championship of the City of Kent—these accomplishments of the basketball team mark the success of the Harsh regime.

When the clarion call to conquest was sent forth last fall by coach Harsh, fifteen basketballers answered—three letter-men and a dozen other aspirants. Using the three letter-men as a nucleus, the coach built up a strong, lithe basketball squad of ten. Howard Evans joined the forces late in the season, increasing the number of letter-men to four, and incidentally strengthening the team by an additional forward. Early in the season, the “K” men on the squad selected Glenn Francis captain for 1924.

In previous seasons most of the games were played out of town, but this year the majority of them were played on the home floor. The usual line-up was: Evans, Rogers or Peterka in the forward positions, Peterka or Rogers, center, with Schroeder and Feeley as guards—replacements were made with Jennings, Brown and Youngen.

All games on the regular schedule—for the most part with Ohio Conference teams—were well played. The high-lights of the season were the defeat of our old rival, West Virginia, and the annexation of the City Championship. In the games for the championship, our boys defeated the Perfection Dairies, 35 to 23, Davey Institute 34 to 14 and again 13 to 9.

None of this year's team will be graduated in June. This fact undoubtedly will make the Kent State five doubly strong next year.

The Next Step

Now and then someone expresses regret that Kent is not like some other college or university in this, that or some other particular. One will say, for example, "Look at such a college!" or "Why can't we be like Rah Rah University?" or "Where are our traditions?"

Just to please such individuals suppose we do "look." Pick that fine old university at Miami for example. We do find a finished college—but do not forget that Miami is 130 years old, more or less, while Kent is in the early 'teens, just a kid among colleges. Look in other directions, if you like, and you will find colleges with more traditions, better plants, more organization in Athletics, etc.; but again remember that fourteen years ago what is now Kent State College was a wooded hillside where woodchucks sunned themselves on pleasant days and cattle grazed without interruption.

Remember that Kent has grown from a mere idea to one of the greatest of the teachers colleges in these few years.

With 1924 a new epoch in the glorious history of our college is to start. A new gymnasium, second to none in Ohio, will be ready for use and a new course—four years in Physical Training and Health Education leading to a degree—will be offered. A special faculty will be employed for this course and eventually a group of several hundred students will be enrolled.

If these things do not stir your imagination it is very likely you are not blessed with such a thing and, if this be the case, it perhaps would be well for you to follow the trail of Rip Van Winkle and sleep twenty years. When you come back and look at Kent State you will find one of the great schools of the Nation; but, instead of saying with pride "My Kent State," you will be counted among those spectators who lacked faith.
Intramural Athletics

Believing that athletics for the many is far superior to athletics for the few, Kent State, during the past year, has carried out an extensive intramural program.

Under the supervision of Frank N. Harsh, new director of Physical Education for Men, the following schedule of sports has been used: Autumn—football, speedball, cross-country, indoor baseball and basketball; Winter—basketball, foul shooting, indoor track and volley ball; Spring—recreation ball, baseball, horse-shoe pitching, tennis and outdoor track.

Other sports such as bowling, boxing and wrestling were included in the original program, but had to be eliminated because of inadequate gymnasium facilities and the lack of funds to cover the cost of instruction.

In order to intensify interest in this work, Director Harsh provided friendly rivalry by dividing the men of the school into two groups—Kenters and Staters. Pasqual Carlozzi was elected to lead the Kenters while Paul Spangler was chosen to captain the Staters.

The Kenters were victorious in speedball but the Staters won the tug-of-war contest and also finished first in football and indoor baseball. Honors were divided in the cross country run.

Despite the handicaps incident to organization and the insufficiency of gymnasium space, the Department of Physical Education for Men has made a remarkable record during its first year.

During the past year more than eighty-five per cent of the men students enrolled in school have taken part in some kind of athletic sports. With a new gymnasium the future development of this important phase of college activities is aglow with promise.

VALENTINE PARTY

The Off Campus Club gave a Valentine Party February ninth in the Music Room in Moulton Hall. The unique feature of the party was the grand march which occurred in the middle of the dance. It was led by two Valentines. The reception line consisted of Miss Verder, Mr. and Mrs. Stopher, Mr. and Mrs. Manchester and Miss Neva Williams.

COLONIAL PARTY

The most picturesque party of the year was the annual Colonial Party given by the Y. W. C. A. on February sixteenth. Colonial furniture was placed around the Music Room and there were lavender and yellow decorations. During intermission eight girls in colonial costume danced the minuet. A grand march, in which those who were in costume participated, followed. The prize for the best costume was given to Miss Naomi Hyland. Prof. and Mrs. Ivins came garbed as George and Martha Washington. Mrs. Bourne, Miss Meyer and Miss Verder were also in costume, and with Miss Marie Young and Miss Marjorie Andrews, made up a charming receiving line.

BRIDGE TEA

Since some people were tired of always having parties at night, the Annual Board decided to have a little different kind of party. They gave a "Bridge Tea" in the Music Room at Moulton Hall from three to five February twenty-fifth. Financially it was not so wonderful, but those who came had a lovely time and voted that we have more such parties.

GINGHAM PARTY

On March seventh the Juniors entertained us at a Gingham Party. All girls came gowned in gingham or light frocks, escorted by gentlemen wearing blue shirts and bow ties. Dancing and cards furnished entertainment. Mr. and Mrs. Miller and Miss Verder were patron and patronesses.
LOWRY SPRING FROLIQUE

It was too bad that everyone could not attend the Spring Frolique the Lowry Hall Girls gave. They surely know how to stage a peppy affair. The party was given Friday, the twenty-eighth of March. A part of Miss Gertrude Kreiselman's Orchestra from Akron furnished superb music for dancing. Guests of the Hall were Miss Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. Byrne. Miss Verder and Miss Trefethen were patronesses.

MOULTON HALL PARTY

It was a pleasing sight that greeted those who attended the second Moulton Hall Party given March 8. The spirit of St. Patrick's Day was prevalent. Mrs. Bourne, Miss Smith and Miss Harriet Wingerd formed the receiving line. Seventy couples danced to snappy music. Games were provided for those who did not dance. The frivolity was interrupted to form a grand march. Confetti and serpentine were given to all and the room was transformed into an entangled mass. The dancing continued until eleven o'clock.

COLLEGE SECTION STAGES REAL PARTY

Amid a setting of ferns, the student body of Kent State danced to the bewitching strains of LeMeyer's Orchestra. The program of the evening was delightfully varied. Miss Ruth Hunter sang two selections and Josephine Woodward gave two solo dances of unusual appeal. The receiving line was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Ivins, Mr. and Mrs. Stopher, and Carlan Elliott.

Chestnut Burr Constitution

ARTICLE I.

Election of Editor-in-Chief and Business Manager.

Section 1.—The presidents of the Junior Degree Class and Junior Normal Class shall, not later than the second week of the Mid-Spring Term, appoint three members from their respective classes to act as a Chestnut Burr Committee.

Section 2.—It shall be the duty of the Chestnut Burr Committee, with the assistance of the faculty adviser and the Editor-in-Chief and Business Manager of the existing Chestnut Burr staff, to elect the new Editor-in-Chief and Business Manager.

Section 3.—The Editor-in-Chief and the Business Manager must be selected from the Junior Degree Class and the Junior Normal Class. In the event that the Editor-in-Chief is elected from the Junior Degree Class, the Business Manager must be elected from the Junior Normal Class. If the Business Manager is elected from the Junior Degree Class, the Editor-in-Chief must be elected from the Junior Normal Class.

ARTICLE II.

Selection of the Staff.

Section 1.—The Editor-in-Chief shall appoint his own assistant and all necessary associates.

Section 2.—The Business Manager shall appoint his own assistants.

Amendment 1.

In the event that the Junior Degree Class is without an organization in the matter of officers, the duties of the president of that Class shall be performed by the president of the College Section.

KENT STATE NORMAL COLLEGE

A Growing Teachers College

An Editorial from the April (1924) Issue of the Normal Instructor and Primary Plans

The Kent State Teachers College, located in northeast Ohio, has made remarkable progress during the past ten years. Official publications indicate that the enrollment has increased more than 900 per cent in the last decade. The college was established in 1912 and was one of the first in Ohio to carry on extension work in professional subjects throughout northeast Ohio. J. E. McGilvrey instituted extension work when he became president of Kent State College. He also worked out with his assistants a very splendid home study department, which gives service to students who have been in residence and who have made good records. Kent College stands for progress. It graduates more than 350 per year. It has a four-year course leading to degree of B. S. in Education well established. Among the many other advantages the college has a splendid rural department, and the teachers have opportunity to observe and practice in sixteen consolidated rural schools in the county in which the college is located. The institution has also inaugurated a great idea in travel in connection with the summer quarter term. Students can register, go to the N. E. A., see the city of Washington and other eastern cities, travel through New England, return to Kent and take up the regular summer quarter work.

There were 3,740 students in attendance at the school last summer. Summer catalogs are now being issued and can be secured by addressing the Summer College Director, Kent State College, Kent, Ohio.
